World of Warcraft: Shadowlands pre-expansion patch notes are live

despite the delay to World of Warcraft's next huge expansion pack, there are a lot of changes coming to the game before the full release of Shadowlands. This pre-expansion patch is set to arrive in WoW on Tuesday, October 13, with a lot of tweaks to make the overall experience fresh for veteran players and more accessible to new ones. Following on from the last expansion, the world of Azeroth is in a bit of a pickle. A certain mischievous someone has pierced the veil between the world and the realm of the dead, which has, in turn, upset the balance of the two.

There will be a Halloween-themed event taking place in-game soon with the update, as well as an optional brand new starting area and experience for all races. This will only be live until the launch of Shadowlands. The release date was initially set for October 27, but since a delay, there is currently no replacement date in mind.

Considering how this pre-patch is going live October 13, we can probably expect to see Shadowlands arrive in November. You'll be tasked with a quest to establish a camp in Icecrown, the former Lich King's domain. It is here where the barrier between Azeroth and the land of the dead has been disturbed... Interestingly, one big change coming in this update before Shadowlands drops is a huge adjustment to levelling.

If you're currently playing WoW you'll know that the level cap is at 120, but Shadowlands is going to be the first expansion to introduce something of a level 'squish'.
